leave the house. The dawn appearing, all the people rose up.
I being sick, the doctor was sent for at once.
Sleeping is necessary to life... He enjoyed sleeping in the open air... The best kind of rest is sleeping... He was fond of sleeping. He heard of his coming back today. Did you hear of his having won a prize? She was fond of being admired. Being admired by all she was much pleased.
The boy was ashamed of having been beaten in class by his sister. I am tired of doing this work.
He was in the habit of boasting of his cleverness. A boasting man is much despised. He was pleased at having found his son. Foxes do not enjoy being hunted, but men enjoy hunting them ([illegible])
I am certain of seeing him to day. Book-reading improves the mind. I cannot decide what I ought to do in this matter.
He was lying at the point of death.

Reviewing the all-round progress of the State, he referred to the "only black cloud on the horizon, the barbarous and bestial conduct of ~~the~~ certain sections of the community in Telengana Dts who by whatever name they like to be known are in essence enemies of society." Between August 1950 and June 1951, these persons accounted for 300 murders all done in cold blood and as befitted cowards, in stealth and in the dead of night. — Mr. Kellodi - PM of Hydrabad on 15-8-51

We say with all the emphasis at our command that Pakistan's policy is fraught with the gravest peril to the 40 million Muslims of India.

The credit goes to the broad-minded leadership of India — Pakistan's policy in general and her attitude towards Kashmir in particular tend to create conditions in this country which in the long run can bring to us only suffering and destruction. None has tried to ascertain the views of ~~the~~ Indian Muslims — The concept of Pakistan ~~has~~ became an emotional slogan with little rational content. Live a life according to the tenets of Islam. ([illegible])

It is a day for rejoicing, for it commemorates our deliverance from foreign rule. It is also a day for a stock-taking of our achievements in the years gone by and how we must face the future. I have every confidence that in future as in past you will keep up your tradition and grow from strength to strength. We have to be alert against the threats that are being wantonly flung in our face. So keep your steel polished and your guns mounted.

Report of the Land Reforms Cttee has stunned the mirasdars.
It created nervousness & alarm among the [illegible] living in Pakistan — [illegible]
